LINE TOPOLOGY

Tulle, video projection, 4mx18m, 2022

The term eikasía (Ancient Greek: εἰκασία), meaning imagination in Greek, was used by Plato to refer to the way humans deal with appearances.

Eikasia is an aerial sculpture that captures a wandering line of light. This line reveals the complexity of its form, while disturbing the perception of its limits.

At night the visibility of the artwork becomes almost entirely dependent on this luminous light that scans it. Revealing a hidden form, an extract, a section of his fine and transparent material, that allows the light to cut through.

LINE TOPOLOGY

Tulle, video projection, 4mx18m, 2022

Eikasia is a light installation that delves into a cognitive, mindful dimension by creating a landscape of imaginary lines and layers of light. The void becomes the space to inhabit within this new scenery: a sensitive piece capable of awakening the senses, the home of the intimate.

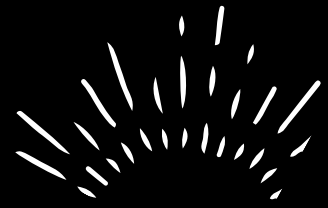

The magnitude of the structure prompts the audience's perception and sense of astonishment. Inviting us to become aware of the true sensitive presence of the architectural object.

At each moment, a different topology emerges, erasing the previous one that has barely been revealed, allowing each spectator having its own vision.

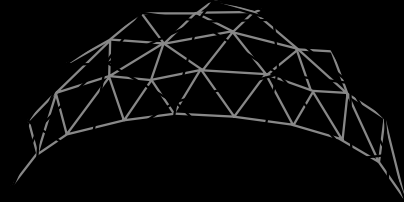

The common thread is the poetry and wonder of the light at each moment. Eikasia proposes to explore one's own relationship to volume by occupying the space.

DORIAN RIGAL MINUIT VISUAL CREATION

Dorian Rigal is a light and digital artist known as Minuit. His artworks are inspired by the nocturnal urban environment, a symbol of uninhibited freedom, far from the restrictive social codes imposed by daylight.

Sometimes focused on interactivity, they can also be similar to projections of pixels that will come to illuminate urban facades, creating an ephemeral and nocturnal art.

In 2010, he specialised in architectural lighting due to his collaboration with Patrick Rimoux. Since 2013, he has trained in digital animation and has carried out mapping projects on buildings and sculptures, notably at Art Basel in Switzerland, the Nuit Blanche in Paris, the Vivid Festival in Sydney and the Archéa Museum in Louvres.
